BIG BATCH OF NOTES AT BANKRUPT'S HEARING

L. C. Thompson Borrowed Right and Left from Friends.

C. G. BOWERS TRUSTEE

After Lively Hearing is Appointed by Referee Quigley to Straighten Out Badly Tangled Affairs of Merchant—Bond Fixed at $6,000.

A veritable flood of notes, ranging from small amounts to many hundreds of dollars, all representing losses to citizens of Howard and vicinity, made their appearance at the bankruptcy hearing of Lott C. Thompson, a Howard merchant, held on Tuesday morning before Henry C. Quigley, as referee. A large number of witnesses from Howard, for the most part those who lost money as a result of loans to L. C. Thompson, were present at the hearing. At the conclusion Charles G. Bowers, of Howard, was appointed trustee and his bond fixed at $6,000. The liabilities of L. C. Thompson are estimated at from $5,000 to $8,000. By many of the creditors it is feared that the latter amount comes nearer to covering the debts.

Whether the matter will reach the Quarter Sessions Court on the question of one of the numerous notes in the case was openly commented upon by Referee Quigley, Col. E. R. Chambers, counsel for some of the creditors, and also by others. The note referred to called for $50 and was indorsed by Charles Pletcher, of Howard. Colonel Chambers declared that the appearance of the note strongly indicated that it was first made out for $10 and later changed to $50. Referee Quigley, on examining the note, also stated that it had been changed at some time or other. Mr. Pletcher, stepping forward, asserted that the amount he had agreed to indorse for was but $10 and that he was not aware that the note called for $50. Mr. Thompson, the bankrupt, who was on the witness stand at the time, denied that he had altered the note in any manner after it had been indorsed by Mr. Pletcher. He explained that he had started to make out a note for $10 for another purpose and that later he had changed it to $50, but that the change was made before he called on Mr. Pletcher for the indorsement.

There was some discussion before Referee Quigley appointed Mr. Bowers as trustee. Counsel for some of the creditors asked that W. H. Thompson, a cousin of the bankrupt, be named. This was opposed on the ground that W. H. Thompson had claims for $2,000 against L. C. Thompson and in addition was a relative. Taking the floor, A. M. Butler asked for the appointment of Mr. Bowers, saying:

"The creditors of Howard want appointed the man who will do the very best that can be done. We want a man who is strictly honest. We are all in the same boat, we have all lost in the matter and we want a trustee appointed who will close up this business honestly and quickly. The sentiment of the Howard creditors is for the appointment of C. G. Bowers."

Lawyer W. Harrison Walker, as counsel for one or more creditors, said he was instructed to ask that W. H. Thompson be named, whereupon Col. Chambers remarked:

"Under the circumstances, the appointment of W. H. Thompson would be unwise and unjust to W. H. Thompson, more so than to anybody else."

After some deliberation Referee Quigley announced the appointment of Mr. Bowers and the bond was fixed at $6,000, which more than covers the amount of assets estimated by L. C. Thompson. The latter said that he estimated his assets at $3,500 or $4,000.

The hearing lasted about one hour. Referee Quigley called out the several claims of creditors in hand, which included two notes for $1,000 each given by L. C. Thompson to W. H. Thompson. When this had been completed Referee Quigley asked if there were any additional claims to be presented, whereupon a dozen or more citizens of Howard, all personal friends of L. C. Thompson, stepped forward with notes in their hands. For the most part these notes had been paid by them when they fell due in the Howard National Bank.

L. C. Thompson was then placed on the witness stand and questioned by his counsel, S. D. Gettig, of Gettig, Bower and Zerby. In his examination L. C. Thompson said that the two notes for $1,000 each held by W. H. Thompson had been given for money actually borrowed from the latter, who subsequently

TINY ELECTRIC GLOBE CAUSES WOMAN'S DEATH

Mrs. Charles E. Mallory Killed at Parents' Home at State College.

WAS HOME ON VISIT

Supposed That Electric Wires, Affected by Storm, Sent Death-Dealing Charge Through Her Body—Collapsed in Her Brother's Arms.

A death so sudden that those about her could hardly comprehend what had happened was that of Mrs. Charles E. Mallory, who was killed by electric shock about 8 o'clock on Monday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Smith, at State College. Mrs. Mallory, who before her marriage was Rose Smith, was visiting at State College with her two little children, Sarah, aged 6 years, and Genevieve, aged 13 months. The family formerly resided at Millheim, but since her marriage Mrs. Mallory lived at Swissvale, a suburb of Pittsburg.

Just how the unfortunate young woman met her death will never be known. It is supposed that she grasped an electric light globe and in this manner received a shock sufficiently violent to kill her. She was unconscious from the first. With the exception of a slight twitching of the body she never regained consciousness and was pronounced dead when Dr. Kipe, who was summoned, arrived at the Smith home.

For some unknown cause, possibly due to the prevailing storm, the electric lights in the Smith home were working badly on Monday night. Mrs. Mallory wanted to go into the cellar and her brother, Paul, accompanied her. He remarked that the electric lights were out of order and suggested that she wait until he might secure a lantern. Mrs. Mallory, however, went ahead of him and the accident happened just as her brother had reached the foot of the cellar stairway. As Paul was about to step off the stairway he was startled to hear his sister exclaim:

"O[illegible], Paul!"

"What's wrong," cried out Paul as he started toward his sister, who was still standing beneath the electric light globe. As he reached her side she groaned and spoke in a smothered voice:

"I've had such an awful shock."

As she spoke she lost consciousness, her body relaxed and she collapsed into her brother's arms. Hurriedly carrying his sister upstairs and laying her on the floor, Paul worked over her for a moment or two and then started out to find a physician. While the latter was arriving other members of the family worked over the unconscious form, but were unable to restore any signs of life. Dr. Kipe, when he examined the body, expressed the belief that Mrs. Mallory had died almost instantly.

Her sudden death was a sad climax to what had been planned as a delightful visit home. Mrs. Mallory and her children arrived at State College for the commencement exercises and had planned returning to Swissvale next week. She was in apparently good health and was laughing as she stepped into the cellar a few seconds before her untimely death.

The deceased was aged 24 years, 6 months and 22 days. Surviving are her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Smith, and the following brothers and sisters: Mrs. Esther Bower, of Jersey Shore; Minerva and Hattie Smith, of State College; Robert J. Smith, of Millheim, and Harry M., and Paul J. Smith, of State College.

Mr. Mallory, who was apprised of his wife's death over the long distant telephone, arrived at State College on Tuesday night. The funeral services were held today, interment being made at Millheim.

CENTRE COUNTIANS IN PHILADELPHIA HOLD ANNUAL BASKET PICNIC IN FAIRMOUNT PARK

The annual basket picnic of the Centre County Association of Philadelphia was held in Fairmount Park, in that city, on Saturday last, and was the most successful in the history of the association. The "North American," in its issue of Sunday, published report of the outing, accompanying it with almost a half page of photographs of the participants. One photograph was a group of four young mothers, each holding a baby on her lap—Mrs. F. Byers and George F. Byers, aged 17 months; Mrs. R. Aiken and Helen K. Aiken, aged 17 months, Mrs. B. W. Thomas and Victor L. Thomas, aged 5 months; Mrs. R. Alberger and Hazel Alberger, aged 2½ years. Another photograph showed the officers, Dr. Roland G. Curtin, president; Ira D. Garman, vice-president, and Dr. J. C. C. Beale, secretary. Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCafferty were portrayed as the two oldest members of the association, while a large photograph presented 5 months old Victor L. Thomas as the youngest member. Another photograph was that of a large group of participants. The "North American" article, written in an especially happy vein, was as follows:

"Good old Centre county, the birthplace of five governors and two United States senators (count 'em), had some nice things said about it on Saturday.

"It all transpired under that great tree on the shady side of Belmont, in the Park where all the former residents of Centre county always come when Ira D. Garman, vice president and chairman of the entertainment committee passes the word through Philadelphia and vicinity, that the annual basket picnic of Centre county folks in these parts is about due.

"Saturday brought the folks and the baskets, groaning under the weight of good things they harbored. Saturday brought sweet faced matrons, who may have not seen Centre county for a long, long time, who were young when they left it, perhaps but whose hearts still cherish the memory of it all. It brought the old men, too, that they might boast of what Centre county has accomplished for the world.

"There was Dr. Roland G. Curtin, nephew of the war-time governor of this state and president of the association. There was the Rev. Robert Harkinson, pastor of the Baptist Temple, who knows how to pass about a witty sally just as well as preach a good sermon, and Captain George P. Runkle, whose schoolship Adams got into port in time to allow him to get out to the green and shake hands with people and be told that he never looked better, even when he was living back in the old county as a boy.

"Now, there were about 300 in the party, but that doesn't begin to represent the number that the association stands for. Secretary "Doc." J. C. C. Beale (the middle initials standing for "Courteous and Considerate," meaning the welfare of other folks) went about telling how the society was growing. Even a certain gentleman who occasionally harps upon race suicide couldn't find fault with the facts and the figures which the secretary had to unfold. It can be readily seen that an association with 500 families ought to be proud of the fact that this represents a membership of 3000 to 4000 in all.

"And when they first began to gather in the afternoon, of course, the children in the party—lots and lots of them—had to have their particular time, the older folks seeing to it that they got fun aplenty. A great banner marked "Centre County Association," spread between the limbs of a gigantic tree, let those about know just what was going on, and here it was that the group grew and grew in size until the benches provided proved inadequate to contain the numbers that arrived, and the green turf was taken up as a sitting place by many.

"Some must have gone home at night feeling that particular physical pain in the wrist that comes about through too much handshaking. Benjamin B. F. Fisher, hero of Libby prison and mighty good speechmaker, seemed a candidate for such kind of honors. He might have found it easy to get out of Libby, but it was a good thing that his right wrist had more power to it than than it did that afternoon when the great company had given him gre.ting, else he would have remained.

"Along toward sundown, after the delights of the picture taking with "Bill, bring your little tot up here in front" and "Get in with us" to the more modest had all been gone through, the basket picnic began in dead earnest. Chairman Garman, of the committee, wanted it distinctly understood that it was a "genuine old-fashioned picnicking—picnic-in-nack-in-nay," as Centre county folks were used to and knew how to run, and nothing formal about it, at that.

"If the fellow and his lady next to you had something in their basket that appealed to your fancies, you had a perfect right to ask for a bite, or take it. You could swap a cruller for a "lady-finger" if you could get by with it and no one to call you down for the action.

"It took a long, long while for the eatables to disappear, for the folks had brought more than they could possibly assimilate, just as is always the case at picnics, and though no gastronomic stunts were attempted, the appetite had been a bit sharpened by the whiff of the open country, and no one hurried. With the white tablecloths spread along the green and the folks seated about, more than one in the party suggested that it was certainly a basket picnic of Centre county style to a certainty. Then the post prandial exercises had their inning.

"Of course, all the officers had to make speeches. President Curtin went back to the good old days back in the good old towns of good old Centre county and hoped all had had a jolly time. Dr. S. Gray Mattern thought that no one in the party looked a day older than he did at the time of the last banquet at the Continental, and everybody seemed to think so well of what the other officers had to say that the entire list was re-elected.

"Mrs. Mary H. Magee had to speak for the ladies auxiliary, for she was announced as a worker in behalf of the old place all loved. L. Olin Meek of the board of directors, let everybody present know, even though they already knew, that Centre county had produced Governors William Bigler, William F. Packer, Andrew G. Curtin, James A Beaver and Daniel Hastings. Then the healths of the youngest and oldest present were drunk in water; a toast to the ones who could not attend followed and the affair was brought to a close as dusk set in.

The officers re-elected were: President, Dr. Roland G. Curtin; Vice-president, Ira D. Garman; Treasurer, Dr. S. Gray Mattern; Secretary, Dr. J. C. C. Beale.

"Among those attending the reunion were: Mrs. Ella H. Cooke, the Rev. and Mrs. Robert Harkinson, Miss Mame Butts, Miss Eva Rich, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. David Dailey, Chauncey Delong, the Rev. L. Kryder Evans, pastor of the Pottstown Presbyterian Church; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Forster, William S. Furst, Mr. and Mrs. Ira D. Garman, Henry A. Haupt, Charles McCafferty, Forrest N. Magee, the Rev. W. K. Foster, Dr. John Becker, Max Liveright, William A. Magee, Prof. William T. Meyer, A. Sternberg, Harry Brew, E. H. Miller, Mrs. W. W. Cox, Miss Ada Null Dorn, Mrs. David J. Beale, Mrs. Martha E. R. Kellar, Mrs. C. T. Lichten, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McCafferty, Dr. Stuart C. Runkle, Miss Lida Saunders and F. Gross Yearick.

Aviator Bauman Says He Positively Will Fly

Fair weather is all that is needed to insure the attendance at the Moose Picnic, on the Fourth of July, at Hecla Park, the largest in the history of that well known picnic ground. Reports from Penns valley indicate that a large crowd will come from that section of the county. A special train over the Pennsylvania Railroad, leaving Bellefonte for Coburn at 7.30 o'clock on the evening of the Fourth, will make it possible for everybody from that section to return home that night. Large crowds are also expected from Lock Haven, Williamsport, Jersey Shore, Philipsburg and other points.

Warren J. Bauman the young aviator who is under contract to make two flights from the baseball grounds, at Hecla Park, yesterday notified the picnic committee that he had secured a new 40-horse-power motor for his Curtiss type aeroplane. Mr. Bauman also instructed the committee to announce that he will positively make the flights as advertised, unless prevented by rain or stormy weather. A photograph of the aeroplane which Mr. Bauman will use in his flights is reproduced on another page of this edition of "The Republican."

In interesting feature of the picnic and one that is already exciting the keenest kind of rivalry among a bevy of young girls is the "Queen's Contest." The prize is a valuable gold watch, now being exhibited in the display window of F. P. Blair & Co. The young girls entered in this contest are making a lively fight to win the prize. They will continue in the field and will be on the picnic grounds until the close of the festivities.

The baseball games, tub races, running races, etc., will keep things moving when the aeroplane flights are not in progress.

Keep in mind the fact that while the big picnic is under the auspices of Bellefonte Lodge No. 206, Loyal Order of Moose, all are cordially invited to attend. Those who may prefer are invited to bring their lunch baskets, but for those who prefer to not be burdened there will be ample refreshments for sale on the grounds. The Central Railroad of Pennsylvania has arranged a special schedule of trains for the picnic which in part is as follows:

Leave Bellefonte for Hecla Park, A. M. 7.05, 8.00, 10.00. P. M. 1.00, 2.20, 5.15 and 6.45

Leave Hecla Park for Bellefonte, P. M. 1.30, 4.41, 6.00, 7.30, 9.15 and 10.45

Leave Mill Hall for Hecla Park, A. M. 8.37, 9.30 and 11.15 P. M. 1.00, and 3.56

Leave Hecla Park for Mill Hall, 2.45, 5.30, 7.08 and 9.00 P. M.

JUDGE SCORES COLDREN SAYS OPTION IS VALID

Decision in Bitterly Contested Suit Over Pleasant Gap Farm.

L. A. SHAEFFER VICTOR

Norhumberland Judge, Presiding Here, Says Coldren Tried to Evade Agreement to Sell When He Found He Could Get a Better Price.

Judge C. R. Savidge, of Northumberland County, presiding in Centre County, on Tuesday handed down an opinion in the much-discussed Shaeffer-Coldren equity case, deciding against and severely scoring Coldren. The suit involved the validity of an option held by L. A. Shaeffer, of Bellefonte, to purchase two farms near Pleasant Gap. In the opinion of Judge Savidge W. H. Coldren, after giving an option on his farm, discovered that his land included valuable limestone and then endeavored to avoid a sale in order that he might dispose of it to others and for a higher price. Judge Savidge's language is quite caustic in some parts of his opinion.

The one case was that of Mr. Shaeffer, for the use of Remembrandt Peale and T. A. Shoemaker vs. W. H. Coldren, his wife, Agnes Coldren, Frank Warfield and the American Lime & Stone Company. The other case was that of the same plaintiffs vs. John Herman, his wife, Alice E. Herman, Samuel Sheffer, Frank Warfield, and the American Lime & Stone Company.

A brief history of the case is that Mr. Shaeffer, holding an option on the farm called at the Coldren home with a certified bank check to make purchase. This was at night and all efforts on Mr. Shaeffer's part to rouse Mr. Coldren and pay over the check were futile. Taking the ground that Mr. Coldren had deliberately avoided him and thus made it impossible for him to pay over the check for the farm, Mr. Shaeffer filed bills in equity, as stated.

It was in Judge Savidge's opinion in the Coldren case that he paid his compliments to the defendant in caustic language. Said Judge Savidge:

"I am convinced that Coldren was trying to evade the option. It was reasonable for Shaeffer to expect him to come to Mr. Blanchard's office in Bellefonte, on Saturday, July 15, 1905. That was the date first agreed upon, and, because Friday was afterward fixed and then the time again changed to Saturday, furnished no good excuse for Coldren to remain away. Had he not been actuated by the prospect of better price he would have been on hand notwithstanding there was hay to make and stock to look after. Had he been at the appointed place on time, Shaeffer could have accommodated him with the money, if required, instead of the certified check.

"After discovering that Coldren would probably not come to town, as expected, it was too late to get the cash. The bank vaults were closed. Anyhow it would be unreasonable to require that Shaeffer should have run the risk of carrying the money six miles out into the country. That Shaeffer was under the reasonable necessity of tendering a certified check instead of cash was wholly the fault of Coldren. And under the circumstances the check was a good tender. A check on a reputable bank, properly certified, ought to be a good tender at all times. It is according to modern custom. It is the convenient and sensible way. Anyhow, under the circumstances here, it was good:

"In tendering the whole purchase money, less the amount of the mortgage, on Monday morning following, Shaeffer went even further than was required of him. He did everything in his power to take up the option, while Coldren did all he could to prevent it.

"There was, of course, a reason for Coldren's action—more money from the Lime Stone Company.

"There is no occasion for wonder that no racket could awaken him from his slumber on the night of July 15th. Of course he slept well. What could be more conducive to sleep and happy dreams than the consciousness that he had avoided an unpleasant situation and was about to reap great profit from his cuteness.

"If Warfield and the American Lime & Stone Company had never been heard of he probably could not have rested until he had the Shaeffer money in bank. A mere whisper would have awakened him.

"Coldren did not want to meet Shaeffer. He constantly avoided him. He did not deal squarely and will not be permitted to reap advantage from such doubtful course of action as the evidence in this case discloses."

NEW STATE ROAD LAW ON REPAIRS & MAINTENANCE

Analysis of Measure as it Applies to State-Aid Highways.

MANY NEW FEATURES

Detailed Explanation of How Counties, Boroughs and Townships may Proceed to Secure Co-oporation of State Highway Department.

"The Republican" last week presented a resume of the new State road law, covering the matter of routes, etc., in and nearby Centre County. This week we publish an analysis of the new law dealing with the question of repairs and maintenance of county and township roads.

The law stipulates that the State shall not furnish any aid or co-operation in the permanent improvement or maintenance of any county or township road to be improved as a State-aid highway until township supervisors shall first petition the county commissioners whereupon it becomes the duty of the commissioners to adopt a resolution authorizing the assumption by the county of its share of the proposed improvement and also to petition the State Highway Department for the aid and co-operation desired. The latter petition must be accompanied by that filed by the township and the two must agree to pay fifty per cent. of the cost of the improvement. The township petition must also agree to bear fifty per cent. of the cost of repairs and maintenance. Upon approval of the petitions the roads come under the authority and supervision of the State Highway Department. The petitioners must enter into an agreement with the State, to be approved by the Attorney General as to form, which shall embody and contain all matters of detail concerning the improvement, repairs and maintenance. Until such an agreement is executed the State will refuse to give aid or co-operate in improving or maintaining the road. The contracts for the work to be done shall be advertised and awarded by the State Highway Commissioner.

In any township wherein the owners of the majority of the assessed valuation of real estate therein shall desire any principal road or highway in the township to be improved and maintained as a State-aid highway, they may petition the supervisors of the township and the latter are then required to petition the county commissioners to make application to the State Highway Department. In all cases where township supervisors or county commissioners refuse to act upon or unduly delay action on any petition for improvement and maintenance of a road as a State-aid highway, any citizen taxpayer of the township or county may by petition present the facts to the Court of Quarter Sessions, requesting the court to order such action thereon as the case may require. After a hearing it shall appear that the truth of the matters alleged in the petition is sustained, the court is required to make an order directing the township supervisors or county commissioners, as the case may be, to forthwith act upon the application for State-aid and that the application be at once forwarded to the State Highway Department.

If within thirty days after the receipt of any petition for highway improvement in any township a petition signed by a majority of the assessed valuation of real estate in the township is filed with the county commissioners protesting against the proposed expenditure upon the part of the township then the county commissioner shall take no action but shall return the petition for improvement to the township supervisors or from whom it was received.

Whenever the county commissioners shall represent by petition to the State Highway Commissioners that any principal highway in said county outside the corporate limits of any city is not in a satisfactory condition for comfortable and easy travel at all seasons of the year and ought to be reconstructed as a State-aid highway it shall be the duty of the State Highway Commissioner to examine such highway and if in the judgment of the State Highway Commissioner said representation is well founded he shall determine what changes shall be made, what portion of it shall be improved and in what manner and shall make the necessary survey, prepare accurate plans and make a detailed estimate of the expense of the work which in his opinion should be done and report the same to the county commissioners and the supervisors or commissioners of the township or townships in which said

CROWNING A KING

Description of Ceremonies Attending Notable Event in London.

Perhaps never in history, certainly never in the experience of any person who witnessed it, has there been an historic scene so magnificent as the ancient abbey of Westminister presented when George V. and Queen Mary were seated in state upon their throne last Thursday.

All who attended the crowning of Edward VII. agree that the ceremony surpassed that spectacle in every circumstance of stately stage-setting, of solemn ritual, inspiring music, the host of royal and eminent parsonages, the wonderful display of rich uniforms, bright gowns and marvelous jewels.

Their majesties with gleaming crowns on their heads and gorgeous robes outspread behind them, the great Cullinan diamond, flashing from the imperial crown; all the nobles of the throne in quaint costumes of ancient offices, with a few modern uniforms; the four peeresses attending the queen, in shimmering gowns, pages in light blue and white grouped behind them; an array of church dignitaries, robed in scarlet and gold, formed the centre of the picture.

Below the king and queen were the young prince of Wales, almost smothered in the dark blue robes of the Order of the Garter, with the peer's crimson mantle around his shoulders, and the duke of Connaught, in the uniform of a field marshal.

Just above the altar, to the right of the king, loaded with massive gold plate, was the girlish Princess Mary, wearing the coronet of a peeress, with hair hanging down her shoulders, and the three younger princes in Scotch kilts. Near them were the other members of the royal family.

Yeomen of the guard, with halberds, lined the aisles throughout the space of the abbey and in the great boxes rising high against the walls and filling the transepts and galleries were 7,000 spectators, forming blocks of quivering, variegated color.

In one group were the future rulers of most of the kingdoms of Europe, with their aides. In another were the diplomatic corps, competing with the royalties in the splendor of their uniforms and decorations. Two blocks, facing across the nave, were composed of peers and peeresses wearing red robes and ermine capes, holding in their laps their coronets until the king was crowned.

Another large section was occupied by members of the House of Commons with their ladies. Some of them wore uniforms, but the majority were in black court dress, indian potentates with gaudy turbans and marvelous jewels formed a striking group in still another section. A scarlet block represented the army; a blue one, the navy; a third, scarlet and white, indicated where the judges in robes and wigs sat, while the boys of Westminister school, who boast themselves of ancient privilege to acclaim the king, were high up in the triforium, and the barons of the Cinque Ports in a box close to the throne.

All the women, apart from the peeresses, were arrayed in court costumes, with white feathers in their hair. Many wore tiaras. There was a treasure of precious stones never before collected in one place.

The ladies-in-waiting to the queen in the Abbey were four duchesses, each attired to carry into effect a color scheme of shot gold. One wore gold, shot grey with pearls; another gold, shot blue and topaz jewels; a third, gold, shot cerise with rubies; a fourth gold, shot green and emerald ornaments.

Princess Mary wore a short white frock and a long royal violet train suspended from the shoulders with gold cord tassels, bordered with ermine and gold braid.

Above the choir stalls were arranged tier after tier of seats, the fronts of the boxes displaying the embroidered arms of three kingdoms. Above the chair stalls were other tiers of seats, and altogether nearly 7,000 people were congregated. Among them the only unofficial were Charles P. Taft, the President's brother, with Mrs. Taft and Miss Taft, J. Pierpont Morgan and eight newspaper correspondents. Mrs. Taft wore a white satin gown embroidered in brilliants, and her jewels were pearls and diamonds. Miss Taft's grown was of white tulle, embroidered in pink, with crystal beads. She wore a pearl necklace. The whole complicated arrangements for seating from 7,000 to 8,000 persons.

Nothing remained to complete the picture but the arrival of their majesties with the great state officials. Every one was on the tiptoe of expectancy and a solemn hush reined over all within the ancient fane as, at a few minutes after 11 o'clock, a fanfare of trumpets announced the entrance of the king and queen.

Every one rose to their feet. The scene was marvelously impressive as the leading figures emerged from the robing room. Many who looked on scarcely restrained themselves from cheering, but the joyful notes of the initial anthem, "I Was Glad," entoned by the choir, suppressed the impulse.

Lining the avenue of the approach to the throne were the picturesque yeomen of the guard in their scarlet uniforms and carrying their pikes. First entered a little group of the clergy. Then came the chaplains of the chapels royal, the dean of Westminister, the archbishops of Canterbury and York, the bishop of London, and other bishops. Next, moving with great deliberation, five pursuivants followed by heralds in quaint medieval costumes, then the officers of the Orders of Knighthood, first those of St. Michael and George, after them the Star of India, the Order of St. Patrick and the Order of the Thistle, then the gentleman usher of the Green Rod, the Scarlet Rod and other functionaries of the royal household, altogether an impressive and picturesque band.

Then came the standards of the kingdoms and the great colonies borne by some of the most eminent men of the empire. Next came the queen's regalia borne by various nobles, and finally the queen herself, in her wonderful coronation gown with the jewels of the Garter. Her long, purple train, embroidered in gold, was borne by six young women, daughters of earls. The queen was followed by the mistress of the robes, the ladies of the bedchamber and the maids of honor.

After the cortege of the queen the king's regalia was carried by the highest nobles of the kingdom, attended by their pages.

The Bible was borne by the bishop of Ripon, the chalice by the bishop of Winchester, the paten by the bishop of London, St. Edward's crown by the bishop of Northumberland, the orb by the duke of Somerset, ths scepter by the duke of Richmond, the sword of state by Earl Beauchamp, the second sword by Earl Roberts, the third sword by Viscount Kitchener, the golden spurs by the earl of Loudoun and Lord Grey de Ruthyn, the sceptre with cross by the duke of Argyll, and St. Edwark's staff by the duke of Roxburghe.

Attended by their pages and by a considerable retinue of high court officials, all in the most striking costumes, the group as it moved slowly up the aisle made an imposing spectacle.

After them walked the king in his crimson robe of state, the train borne by eight noblemen of high rank, the collar of the Garter around his neck and on his head the cap of state.

Their majesties passed their thrones and procedeed to the chairs of state, where they knelt at the foot stools.

Then the service proper began. The ancient ceremonial familiar for 1,200 years was performed. The archbishop of Canterburg presented the king. Facing the four sides of the abbey in succession, he announced:

"Sirs: I here present unto you King George, the undoubted king of this realm. Wherefore all you who are come this day to do your homage and service, are you willing to do the same?"

As the voice of the archbishop died away the spell was broken by the blast of the trumpets, and a mighty chorus of "God Save the King" fairly shook the great edifice.

The ceremony in the Abbey consumed more than three hours.

After the sermon the king kissed the Bible, swearing to govern according to the laws of the land and to maintain the Protestant reform religion, the recently modified form of this latter declaration being the single departure from the traditional recital.

The king was anointed by the archbishop of Canterbury; the lord great chamberlain touched his majesty's heels with the spurs; he was girded with the sword of state, invested with the imperial robe and orb, and received the ring and scepter.

Now reverently the archbishop placed the crown upon the king's head. Again the trumpets sounded, and once more the abbey resounded with cheers and the cry, "God save the king."

Ascending the throne the king received the homage of the archbishop and the new Prince of Wales, the princess of the royal blood and the peers, who touched the crown and kissed the monarch's cheek.

The more simple ceremony of the crowning of the queen consort followed. Her majesty was anointed, the crown placed upon her head, and she received the ring, the scepter and the ivory rod. Then the queen ascended the throne and was seated by the king. The oblations at the altar and the sacrament concluded the chief functions of the ceremony. The procession was then re-formed for the return to Buckingham Palace.

When the actual crowning of the king was signaled to the public by the pealing of the bells in the tower of the abbey the host in Parliament Square broke out in a chorus of "God Save the King." The strains were taken up at each succeeding section of stands along the route, until perhaps the largest choir ever known to history was simultaneously singing the national anthem.

The dress worn by Queen Mary at the coronation was indeed worthy of the occasion both for its beauty and magnificence. Made of rich white English satin, it was fashioned in princess style. A narrow border of oak leaves and acorns in dull, deep gold ornamented the hem all round, and above this, with a small blank interval to emphasize the effect, was a deeper border of broken lines of bright gold representing waves, and intended to symbolize the imperial seas. A lotus lily, the Indian symbol of long life and happiness, and its foliage was embroidered in the centre of the waves. Higher up the skirt, in the centre, the altar of India was raised in gold, with the five points set in a guard of flames, representing the motto of the Indian empire —"Heaven's light our guide."

A striking and handsome design typifying the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland rose at each side of the skirt, showing Tudor roses in bright gold, thistles partly in dull and partly in burnished gold and shamrocks in rich dead gold, with the foliage of each intertwining in light gold threads. This embroidery was continued up the bodice, in the centre of which stood out a Tudor rose with two thistles head downward below. The low neck was bordered all around with adesign of shamrocks in dull gold and there was a wide tucker of filmy gold lace over white silk tulle.

The sleeves were embroidered with thistles and shamrocks in the same design as those on the skirt, and gold lace was utilized to cover the openings. The back of the bodice, which was hidden by the long train, was also richly wrought in gold. The skirt was very full and the train round. A wide box pleat opened like a fan from the waistline, later merging in the train.

The train of purple velvet, ermine and gold was perfectly regal. It was attached to the dress at the shoulders by rich gold cords with tassels. It was lined with ermine dotted with black tails. Round the outer edge was a narrow border of ermine and then a single line of burnished gold embroidery, while a second border was of acorns and oak leaves raised in dull gold, intercepted at frequent intervals by medallions bearing the rose, the thistle and the shamrock in turn. At each side of the train where it was turned at the bottom was a larger medallion and three more of the same size in the center at the end.

Over the train at the shoulders the queen wore an ermine cape which reached not quite to the waist.

The design of roses, shamrocks and thistles raised in dull and bright gold was carried out all over the train, enriching the effects of the purple velvet. Near the centre were also worked in old English lettering the queen's cipher in dead gold, and this was transfixed by a slender Latin cross with a trefoil at each end in bright gold. Above this was the crown in gold.

Altogether the robe presented an appearance of great magnificence, and all present agreed that the picture of queenly dignity was complete when her majesty wore her crown after the ceremony of anointing.

Alfalfa is the great farm enricher. Those who are leaning how to grow it successfully connect it in their minds with lime, and with inoculation of the field where it is sown. The field can be inoculated by spreading over it 200 pounds or more per acre of soil from a good alfalfa field, and harrowing it and the seed in together at once. Dr. E. H. Jenkins of the Connecticut Experiment Station, states that soil from a good sweet-clover field is equally able to provide the bacteria which lives in the nodules of the alfalfa roots, and which enables this plant to take the nitrogen from the air.

POOR THEATRICAL YEAR

Automobiles and Moving Picture Shows Play Havoc With the Stage.

The theatrical season of 1910-11, just ended, was the most disastrous recorded of the business in this country since modern methods of producing plays came into existence. Some of the small theatrical managers are practically bankrupt, and more than one famous firm is staggering under the aggregate cost of an appalling series of failures.

Four causes have contributed to the evils of the theatrical business which culminated in the disastrous season just closed. In the order of their importance they are, automobiles, moving pictures, reckless distribution of passes and free tickets, and the theatrical civil war. Under the last heading is included overproduction of theater building and deterioration of plays and acting. The third cause passes—was also born of the theatrical fight.

Automobiles and moving pictures have caught the theatrical business between an upper and nether millstone. Men and women who were regular patrons of the theater a few years ago now spend their evenings in the open air until the cold of winter forces them to store their machines. As soon as spring is at hand, owners of motor cars turn deaf ears to the lure of the box office. As a result, their patronage is not only confined to three or four months, but, through drifting away from the theatergoing habit, it is considerably cut down during the heart of winter. The desertion of the people who ride in automobiles leaves great gaps on the lower floor of the theater, moving pictures have wrought greater havoc in the gallery and balcony.

For purposes of generalization, the statement has been made that moving pictures prey on the purchasers of cheap tickets in the big theaters. As a matter of fact, the film houses are making inroads into the $1.50 and $2 seats. Last winter a representative of a big New York theatrical firm counted 32 automobiles standing before a moving picture house in the outskirts of Chicago. Nearly every day during the sessions of the United States Supreme Court in Washington, two or more of the distinguished justices pass into the moving picture theater located in Pennsylvania avenue and spend a quarter or half an hour gazing at dancing shadows before continuing their journey to their homes and social duties.

Wholesale distribution of passes, known as "papering the house," reached appalling proportions during the past season. The run of a play in New York or Chicago depends to a considerable extent on the business, or apparent business, attracted to the theater during the first few weeks of its existence. Its drawing power in smaller cities and towns after a metropolitan engagement depends very much on the length of the New York or Chicago run. Consequently, the size of the first few audiences is a matter of supreme importance to the owner of a play. He knows that many theatrical attractions which have played to capacity business during long runs on Broadway were "papered" for the first or second week. The work of "putting out the paper" requires the undivided attention of one or two men, and has been reduced to an exact science.

It is quite easy to fill a house on the first night of a play in New York. Eighty or 100 seats are turned over to the New York and Brooklyn newspaper critics and a few magazine reviewers. Friends of the actors in the company and employes of various theatrical business offices gladly accept from 100 to 300 seats. If the first night sale of tickets is light, it is possible to give away a considerable number of surplus coupons to actors out of an engagement, who swarm to opening performances. The real work of "papering" comes on the second and succeeding nights, if the play does not make an instant and genuine hit.

The easiest and most effective method of "putting out paper" is distribution through the big department stores. If a manager wishes to give away only a few seats, the necessary number of passes or untorn tickets, which are punched to show that they have not been sold, are turned over to the head of a department in one of the stores. He gives these to the buyers from out-of-town stores, telling them that he has a "friend" in that particular theater, if it is necessary to deal out blocks of tickets, the heads of departments turn the passes over to the employes of the store, or telephone a list of names to the theatrical offices with the request that the seats be left at the box office in the names of the men and girls set forth on his list.

It is, of course, impossible to calculate the exact number of passes which were issued this season, but managers know that the aggregate is almost unbelievable. One expert declares that 8,000seats were given away during a single week by the theaters in Chicago last winter. A play which ran several months in New York, closing only a few weeks ago, played to weekly receips that passed the $4,000 mark just once. The sale of seats each night, except Saturday, averaged between $250 and $350. If every seat had been sold, the receipts would have amounted to nearly $1,700 a night or about $13,000 a week. Yet the house was filled to capacity at every performance. During the entire run, seats worth $1,300 or $1,400 were given away at least six times a week.

The snow storm of passes that fell upon virgin territory in New York, Chicago and other cities this season and last has created an army of "deadheads" which is a menace that can be appreciated only by the men who put their money into the business of catering to the public's desire for entertainment.

Over-production of theaters, which was a fruit of the theatrical war, has had a result which anyone can understand and which a schoolboy might have predicted. The theatrical business does not, in many of its elements, differ from any other business. If one grocery shop, situated in a desirable city block, receives all the patronage in the neighborhood, yet makes merely a fair profit on the investment, it is evident that the invasion of that field by a second grocery store of equal merit will result in a divison as the business and loss to the two investors. The situation has been paralleled in almost all cities or towns of 25,000 or more inhabitants.

In communities where one first class playhouse has paid a fair return on the cost and maintenance of the building, there will be found this year two or three theaters charging $1.50 to $2 for the best seats. These new and unnecessary buildings have been erected at a cost that will run into millions and, in view of the approaching termination of the theatrical war, the money has been absolutely thrown away on a string of "white elephants." The paid attendance at these houses has been smaller than the proprietors wish observers to know. The managers have filled their seats by issuing passes, thus merely adding to the evils of an intolerable situation. As a result, theatrical attractions which would have drawn business amounting to $10,000 or $12,000 a week a few years ago, are now considered lucky if they play to $4,000 or $5,000 or $6,000 a week.

Lowering the price of seats, according to theatrical managers, does not increase business, but has an opposite effect. As a result of many trials, they have come to the conclusion that theater-goers grow suspicious when the rates go down, and bestow more patronage upon plays which are advertised at $1.50 for seats than those that are offered at the rate of $1 for best seats. The word "cheap," it is explained, is very dangerous in theatrical advertising. Instead of lowering prices, there is now on foot a movement to increase prices in New York and Chicago, and eliminate ticket speculators. The London theaters charge half a guinea, for orchestra chairs, and American managers are seriously considering the advisability of following the English plan, and make $2.50 the fixed charge for orchestra chairs,in the best theaters of America's metropoli.

Deterioration of plays and acting, which has been widely discussed by critics, is not as scribus a feature of the present situation as many reviewers believe. There are as many good plays at present as there were a few years ago, but they are offset by the very large number of bad plays. This is true because there are now so many theaters to fill that managers are compelled to put on plays which they would reject if the demand for attractions to keep many houses running were less insistent.

This continued rush is responsible for bad acting, which should be classed as bad casting. In New York this season, play after play was put on the stage in a hurried, slipshod manner, and with actors who were improperly rehearsed and not qualified for the roles to which they were assigned. Two plays which had enjoyed a remarkable success in London, were produced in New York this year by one manager. They failed, and experts who had seen the English productions declare that bad acting and staging alone prevented the addition of two distinct hits to this season's list of American successes.

The end of the theatrical war, which is in sight, will remedy these conditions. A great number of first class theaters will be torn down or turned over to moving pictures. Fewer plays will be produced, and those put on the stage will, as in former years, be more carefully selected, and played by better companies. The army of actors will be cut in half, but it will be a case of the survival of the fittest. Whether the automobile and moving picture crazes will continue or decline, is another question. Frederick J. Haskin in Pittsburg Gazette Times.

In the Wake of the Measles.

The little son of Mrs. O. B. Palmer, Little Rock, Ark., had the measles. The result was a severe cough which grew worse and he coud not sleep. CLEARS UP BILLS

Gov. Tener Disposes of Last of Measures Passed by Legislature.

Governor Tener on Friday announced the disposal of the last of the bills passed by the general assembly which adjourned on May 25. Eighteen bills were acted upon, 8 of which were signed and 10 vetoed.

Among the bills approved was the McIlheny judges' retirement bill. It provides that, after January 1, 1912, if the governor is of opinion that a judge of the appellate or lower courts is physically or mentally disabled from performing his duties, he shall notify the judge of his opinion and, if the judge resigns in 30 days, he shall receive, for the balance of the term for which he was elected, his full salary as if in active service, provided he holds himself in readiness to advise with successors and colleagues and to act as master, referee, auditor or examiner.

Judges of Common Pleas or Orphans Courts serving 25 years continuously, immediately prior to date of resignation, and having reached 70 years of age, and judges of the Supreme or Superior Courts, serving continuously for 20 years, who shall resign and be ready to act as master or in other capacities, shall receive, during remainder of life, one-half of the salary of their office.

Any judge of the Appellate courts who shall have served 20 years continuously, and any judge of a county court who shall have reached the age of 70 and served continuously for 25 years, and shall hold himself in readiness to advise or perform such duties as required after his honorable retirement from office by expiration of term, is also to receive, for life, one-half of the salary he would have received in active service.

Judges retiring can take no extra compensation. Vacancies so created are to be filled as required by law.

The bill to establish a State Bureau of Standards of Weights and Measures, which was signed, provides $2,500 for purchasing a set of standards from the national government and creates a bureau in the Department of Internal Affairs in charge of a chief at $2,000 a year. The bureau is to have an office in the capitol and $3,600 a year is allowed for expenses in traveling and other work. The governor vetoed the bill making an appropriation for this purpose because it is already care taken of.

Other bills signed include:

Prohibiting appropriations to unincorporated charitable, reformatory or correctional institutions.

Allowing companies formed for manufacturing electrical apparatus, chartered in other states, to hold real estate in Pennsylvania.

Enabling corporations not authorized by law to hold real estate to convey title to reality purchased prior to the approval of this act.

Appropriating $6,000 for purchase of historical works relative to Pennsylvania volunteers in the Civil War.

In vetoing the bill relative to mining under municipalities, the governor says that it would be best to await the report of commissioners named to study the subject and suggest laws to the next Legislature.

On the bonded warehouse certificate bill the governor says: "In view of the recent decisions of the courts on the subject the approval of this legislation would seem to be alike unwise and unnecessary.

Twelve Huntingdon county teachers will be compelled to take one or two year's advanced normal or college work as a result of missing an examination there a few weeks ago. The permanent certificate examination was held the first part of June here and about a dozen young men and women decided they would take the examination at the second gathering as there have always been two or three such chances. The school code intervened and now the state board refuse to allow the local examining board to examine these teachers under the old law, and as the new code permits but one such examination a year they have lost their chance. When they do take it, it will be under the new regime and all of them are short one or two advanced branches which they must get.

COLD FEET.

It apparently required but a glance at the one or two genuine letters in the "Centre Democrat," urging the effacement of Guffey, Hall and Dewalt, for, the "Democratic Watchman" to acquire a beautiful case of "cold feet." While still frightened, the "Watchman" turned against its three chief benefactors and thus run up the white flag:

"We are not insisting that those who have managed the party contests in recent years and maintained the party organization shall be continued in control of party affairs. If their retirement and the substitution of others is desired by the rank and file of the party, we shall offer neither objection nor obstacle to the plans."

One can almost see the look of reproach on the faces of Guffey, Hall and Dewalt and hear them exclaim:

Et tu Brute!

NO REVISION NOW.

Speaking as chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, and reflecting the views of President Taft, Senator Penrose predicts that there will be no tariff revision by the present special session of Congress. Senator Penrose made this statement:

"If the Republican party shall feel called upon to adjust any of the tariff schedules, in deference to any sentiment alleged to exist it will do so in its own way and in its own time, and only after thorough investigation and computation of reliable data which will show clearly that any particular schedule contains such defects and above all, it must be shown that no American industry shall suffer by such revision.

"If there is any revision it will not be before next session, and then it will be along proper lines. Congress cannot revise without the President's approval, and an improper revision cannot get past him. It is probable that there will be revision next session. Bul it is most unfortunate that tariff agitation exists continually, and so soon after the passage of the Payne-Aldrich bill.

"The so-called farmers free list and the wool bill, passed by the Democratic House are crudely drawn. They seem chiefly to be for demagogic effect and are without any element of constructive statesmanship. The wool bill is admittedly worse than the Wilson bill. These bills have been hastily prepared and without hearings or proper consideration and it is almost inconceivable that the auditors of these measures would desire to see them enacted into law.

"The free list, so-called, constitutes an appeal to the farmer, but gives him no real relief, and would accomplish little or nothing.

"A strong demand has existed in the United States that these tariff matters should be referred to a tariff board for report thereon. While the tariff commission bill failed of passage in the last hours of Congress, yet for all tariff purposes a board is provided in an appropriation bill and has been engaged in thoroughly overhauling the wool schedule.

"The board will not be prepared to report until next December and an intelligent revision of schedule K cannot be made until after such report is received and it can be safely predicted that no wool bill will be enacted into law before next session. The wool schedule is the most complicated in the whole tariff bill. It embraces an industry covering the continent, beginning with the sheep in the Rocky mountains and ending with the finished product in Boston and Philadelphia, and only after thorough investigation and compilation of reliable data which will show clearly what revision is necessary can this be undertaken in a proper manner.

"Unless wool is protected the manufacturer will have no wool and unless the manufacturer is protected the wool grower will have no market for his product.

"An accidental action of the Senate in passing a resolution directing the finance committee to report on the wool bill in 20 days was so preposterous that it left no other alternative for the majority than to report back the bills adversely, throwing the responsibility on the Senate.

"When these bills come up for consideration, should they ever come up, they doubtless will furnish plenty of elements of discord for the temporary majority which instructed the Senate to report them."

NEW STATE ROAD LAW

highway may lie. If the county commissioners and township supervisors or commissioners then decide that it is advisable to go on with the work they shall enter into an agreement with the State Highway Department.

No section of State-aid highway improved shall be less than one-half mile in length nor shall the improved portion thereof be less than twelve feet in width.

The work of "maintaining and repairing all State-aid highways improved under the provisions of this act, or which shall have been previously reconstructed by State aid, shall be done by the State Highway Department and fifty per cent. of the cost thereof shall be paid by the several townships wherein such roads may lie or by the county when such roads have been improved upon the petition of such county without the co-operation of the township."

Where a portion of a highway traversing one or more townships and for the improvement and maintenance of which as a State-aid highway application has been made by said township or townships shall lie within the limits of or traverse any borough or boroughs or any incorporated town or towns and where the failure of said borough or boroughs or incorporated town or towns to improve the said highway would leave a break or unimproved section in a continuous improved highway, it shall be lawful for the county commissioners of the county in which said highway is located to enter into an agreement with said borough or boroughs or incorporated town or towns to bear a portion of the expenses of said improvement of the highway within the limits of the said borough or town in the same manner as is provided for the co-operation between the counties and townships. It is provided, however, that an improved road shall have been previously constructed in an adjoining township, borough or town to the lines of the borough or town making application or petition for such improvement. The State Highway Commissioner is authorized to bear fifty per cent. of the expense of said improvement. Boroughs or incorporated towns shall only receive aid from the State in cases where failure to receive such aid would prevent a continuous improvement of an important State-aid highway, although any borough or incorporated town which is willing to pay one-half the cost of constructing a road or roads may make application direct to the State Highway Department.

Any county, township, borough or incorporated town may through its commissioners or supervisors or councils bid for the construction or improvement of such portion of any State-aid highway as may lie within it, and any county, township, borough or incorporated town submitting such bid shall have the same consideration and shall be governed by the same rules and regulations of the department as in the case of other bidders and if awarded the contract shall fulfill the same and be subject to the same conditions and regulations as provided for other contractors.

Where any person or corporations shall sustain damage by the taking of land to alter the location of any State-aid highway which may be improved under the act and the county commissioners and township supervisors or commissioners and the parties so injured cannot agree on the amount or damage sustained, such persons or corporations may present their petition to the Court of Quarter Sessions for the appointment of viewers to ascertain and assess such damages and the procedure therein shall be governed by existing laws relating to the assessment of damages in opening public highways. Such damages, when ascertained, shall be paid fifty per cent. by the State, twenty-five per cent. by the township. Where the land so taken is upon the petition of a township or county, and not jointly, fifty per cent. of the damages shall be paid by the township or county making the petition.

Houser Reunion.

The Houser reunion held in Dreese's woods, near Peru station, on Friday of last week was a decided success in every respect. It was the first annual gathering of the Houser family and their friends and every one seemed determined to make the day one of genuine pleasure. The morning trains brought a large number of persons. Others came in conveyances and by ten o'clock fully two hundred persons had registered in a book opened to receive the names of those in attendance. The time was occupied until the noon hour renewing old acquaintances, in social converse and in amusements of various kinds. Promptly at 12 o'clock dinner was announced, and such a dinner as it was. Everything in abundance and the best the land could afford. The ladies were highly and deservedly praised for the most excellent dinner prepared. At one o'clock a temporary organization was effected by the election of the following officers: David Houser, Jr., president; John W. Houser, secretary; William W. Schenck, treasurer, and George P. Bible, historian. C. C. Shuey, of Bellefonte, was then introduced as the first speaker and gave an account of the first settlement at Houserville by Jacob Houser and the part he and his descendants took in making history for Centre County.

The next speaker was Clement Dale, Esq., of Bellefonte, who spoke of the different families who settled along Spring Creek, the hardships they endured while clearing the land, building for themselves homes, and preparing the soil for crops which have been raised so abundantly all through that section of the county. Among these early settlers, the speaker said, was Jacob Houser, whose energy, frugality and business tact brought its reward, and when he died he was the owner of several large farms and also of a mill, saw-mill and woolen factory. Mr. Dale's speech was largely reminiscent in character and was listened to with great interest by the audience. The third speaker was John E. Murray, of Lemont, who became quite eloquent and intensely patriotic. He spoke of the liberties we enjoy and the sacrifices that were required to establish those liberties and how thankful we ought to be that we have such a free government. All the exercises were interspersed with most excellent music. At 4 o'clock the people left for their several homes, having voted the first Houser family reunion a grand succees.

Susan Robb Bowes Dead.

Susan Robb Bowes, wife of Thomas Bowes, of Howard, died on Friday, June 23, aged 68 years and 5 days. Deceased was born in Liberty township and was married to Mr. Bowes in December, 1858. To this union seventeen children were born, those surviving being as follows: Emanuel and Harmon Bower, of Marsh Creek; Charles, at home; Mrs. Jacob Robb, Howard; John, of Jersey Shore; Mrs. John Wagner, of Howard; Manes Bowes, of Clearfield; Della Bowes, at home; Mrs. Clarence Evans, of Wilkes-Barre; Ada Bowes, at home; Lester Bowes, of Northumberland. These children are dead: Andrew, Lydia DeWitt, Robert, Effie, Edith and Lewis. There also survive 47 grand-children and 9 great-grand-children. Mrs. Bowes was a splendid woman and was greatly respected and admired by a large circle of friends, by all of whom her death is sincerely mourned. She was a member of the Christian church, of Howard, and always was active in the work of the Master. Before her death she selected the hymns she wished sung at her funeral and these were beautifully rendered by a choir of four members. The funeral services were conducted from her late home, conducted by her pastor, Rev. W. H. Patterson, of Blanchard. The pallbearers were eight of her grandchildren.

Died at Altoona.

Awakening the members of the household at the home of George Baer, Thirteenth street and Seventeenth avenue, Altoona, last Thursday morning, Miss Annie M. Funk, of Warriorsmark, passed away within a short time, before Dr. Amos F. Taylor, who was hastily summoned, arrived.

The lady was a relative of the Baers and had been visiting them for about a month. She was 75 years of age but was as lively as a young girl. Her health was not of the best, but there was no cause for immediate alarm and she had been up and enjoying herself the night before. Her death came at 3 o'clock in the morning. Dr. Taylor pronounced that it had been caused by acute heart failure.

Miss Funk was born in Warriorsmark Valley, August 20, 1835. Two brothers, David of Warriorsmark, and James, of Washington, D. C., survive out of a large family.

The body was taken to Warriorsmark and services were held there at 9:30 Saturday morning, followed by interment at that place. Miss Funk was a life long member of the Baptist church.

George B. Flack Dead.

George B. Flack, well known in Bellefonte, died on Sunday evening at 8.30 o'clock at his late residence at the old Valentine forge. Deceased was aged 54 years. His death was due to heart failure. Funeral services were held on Wednesday afternoon, interment being made in the Union cemetery.

BANKRUPTCY HEARING

produced the canceled checks for the amount paid through the First National Bank at Bellefonte. L. C. Thompson further stated that when he made the numerous other loans he was not aware of his actual financial condition. On cross-examination by Col. Chambers the witness admitted that he had recently paid $5 on an account against him but that this was shortly before his store had been closed.

"Don't you think it would have been better had you not paid out the $5 and instead had put it into the jackpot so we all might have got a pull at it?" interjected A. M. Butler, but to this the witness offered no reply.

On further examination the witness admitted that shortly before he had filed his petition in bankruptcy he had turned over to W. H. Thompson six sheep in payment of an additional loan of $30. The witness stated that the sheep belonged to his son but that the latter had agreed to the transfer. He was unable to recall the exact date of the sale of the sheep, but thought it was about the last of May or the first of June. The petition in bankruptcy was filed June 10, last.

When the witness was turned over to his creditors for further questioning, A. M. Butler asked him:

"Do you mean to say, Mr. Thompson, that when you came to us and borrowed money that you didn't know your true financial condition and that you were borrowing from us to pay claims of others, and that your bills amounted to something like $8,000?"

"No, I didn't," replied the witness.

"Well, then you are a pretty poor business man," retorted Mr. Butler.

"I confess that I am," rejoined the witness. "I did not realize my condition until I went to my attorney, Mr. Gettig. I kept no ledger account of my bills and did not know where I was at."

Examined by Referee Quigley the witness stated that his assets amounted to about $3500 in stock and about $500 in bills that could be collected.

Just before the hearing was concluded there was enacted a pathetic incident. The venerable Henry Thompson, father of the bankrupt, standing erect and speaking with self control that under the circumstances was admirable, said:

"Now that we are all here together I want to say a few things. I am interested in this matter for three reasons. I happen to be represented in the claims presented here, perhaps to the amount of one-half of all of them. In the second place I want to see appointed a trustee who is honest and who will clear up this matter as quickly as possible. Objection has been raised to the naming of W. H. Thompson because he is a relative. Mr. Bowers, whose appointment is also asked for, is a relative of probably one-half of the creditors here. I only mention that, not as a reflection on Mr. Bowers but simply because mention was made of the fact that W. H. Thompson is a relative. The third reason is because the man here is my son, and that I cannot forget. I cannot defend what he has done, I cannot defend him for that. I did not know until a few days ago that all these notes were out. I held claims against him and I must admit that as I looked at the matter I was afraid that in the end I would be what you would call 'stuck.' I want to bear my loss with the rest of you. I also want the trustee named to clear up the matter and pay me only my share out of what the assets bring. I make this statement here while we are all together because I want you, my friends, to understand my position."

"We do understand it," heartily spoke up I. S. Frain, also one of the creditors to lose in the matter, while others also assured Mr. Thompson of their sympathy.

We are safe in saying that the above mentioned two gentlemen have caught more than any two others in this locality. They are in the height of their glory when able to crawl among the brush and fish for the spreckled beauties. It was actually so brushy that J. Harold lost his fishing rod, hooks, pipe, coat and hat, but nevertheless they brought home 160 of the finest trout ever caught in mountain streams.

Another of our old residents has passed over the river. Another has gone to his final resting place. Joseph Gill passed away peacefully on Wednesday morning of last week, at 9.30 o'clock. P. E. Hicks, the genial station master for the P. R. R. at this place, is at present taking his vacation at Atlantic City and Philadelphia. This is his first trip to the seashore and he said before his departure that if he went in bathing at all it would be when the tide was out, for he knew that if he plunged in while the tide was up all Atlantic City would be flooded and quickly made a thing of the past.

The notice of the ordinance of our "borough" has been posted by Burgess Burnside and prohibits anything but an absolutely safe and sane Fourth of July. The ordinance not only prohibits the firing of violent explosives, but also takes up the most minute details, one of which is to make it a misdemeanor for anybody to fire more than twenty-five sticks of dynamite at one time. All persons violating the ordinance and later found on this earth will be arrested and fined in accordance with the Scotia Blue Laws.

Since the closing of the mines in January Superintendent Valentine has been kept busy with a part of the men, gathering up the refuse of the old Carnegie Company and now he has shipped to Bellefonte over 5,000 tons of ore that analyzes over 45 per cent. iron And that means something for the Bellefonte furnaces, for when they bought the Scotia mines that was all called flint and considered useless. Mr. Valentine, being a practical ore man, can tell flint from ore and he decided that it would pay to simply run it through the jigs again. The result is as stated and its a dandy feather in the cap of Superintendent Valentine.

On Thursday evening about fifty of Hugo Kast's friends dropped in upon him, just to remind him that it was his 74th birthday anniversary. The old gentleman lives by himself and when so many rushed in upon him at once the tears came to his eyes as each visitor laid something on the table, provision, smoking tobacco, etc. When he was able to find his voice the old gentleman made a nice, little speech, thanking his friends for their thoughtfulness and wishing that each one might live to celebrate the 100th birthday anniversary, very gracefully remarking that it would be a pleasure to him to live and be on hand when the youngest in the group reached the century mark. Another pretty thought he expressed was that he wished each one might be able to be surrounded by brothers and sisters in their native country, giving this little sentiment a touch of emphasis by remarking that he was alone in this country and never expected to again see any of his home folks.

Snyder home, was recently elected supervising principal of the Horton township (Elk County) schools, with headquarters at Brockport. His salary was fixed at $900 for a term of eight months. Next time you see Milford Pletcher, Charley Cook and Allison R. Moon ask them how about the moving picture show at Bellefonte. Several days ago the three were in Bellefonte and while on their way to the depot Pletcher suggested that they drop in and see Clayt. Brown's moving pictures. They went inside and once there they became so interested that they missed the last train for home. All three made a flying dash to catch the train—just imagine Pletcher making a flying dash—but missed it by a few minutes. It was a hot night but the temperature didn't begin to equal the temper of the three strangers stranded in a distant land. Each one planked down a dollar and landed at Howard about 10 o'clock at night. Cook and Moon didn't get home until some time Sunday morning. Next time Pletcher will take along his automobile.

The CALL

It Occasions a Struggle Between Love and Duty

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Copyright by American Press Association, 1911.

Sylvia Moore was visiting at her uncle's Texas ranch when she read the flaring headlines announcing that Timothy Robeson's regiment had been ordered to El Paso to take part in the maneuvers on the Mexican border. She stared at the newspaper until the members of the family made no secret of their alarm.

"What is the matter, Sylvia?" demanded Annie Lake curiously. "Has Timothy eloped with a pretty widow, or is he the victim of"—

"He might as well be dead and buried," cried Sylvia tragically as she tossed the paper across the table. "He's gone to war."

"War!" they repeated. "What war?"

"Why, the war with Mexico, of course. Hasn't the president ordered a large force to the border?"

Mr. Lake picked up the newspaper and read aloud the surprising intelligence that the war department had ordered a large body of men, arms and supplies to El Paso to take part in army maneuvers. He read that troops were already on the way and that within a few days at the latest a tented city would spring up beside the southwestern border.

Last of all he announced that the regiment of which Timothy Robeson was a lieutenant was on its way to Texas.

"On the strength of this report you are positive that Tim's going to be killed?" asked her uncle, with a quizzical smile at Sylvia.

"Yes," said Sylvia positively. "I had the queerest feeling when I said goodby to him in New York. You know he's always joking, and when he said, 'Be sure to return in time to dance at your own wedding, Sylvia,' it came over me that I might never come back; that there might never be a wedding at all. But I never thought of Tim being the one"— Tears came into Sylvia's forgetmenot eyes, and her cousin extended a sympathizing handkerchief.

"Pooh!" uttered Mr. Lake contemptuously. "You make me extremely weary, Sylvia. As an American girl I thought you had more pride of country than to weep because your young man is called to arms."

"A man's first duty cannot always be to his country. Oh, I know that's treasonable or something horrible, but I would not have thought so much about it if we had not gone over to El Paso the other day and witnessed all the fighting across the river in Juarez."

"We didn't see very much, just some puffs of smoke and lots of noise. It wasn't nearly as bloody as I anticipated," remarked Annie thoughtfully.

"I saw enough. I wouldn't go there again for anything in the world," declared Sylvia, rising from her chair and dropping a good night kiss on her aunt's unconscious brow.

"Then you won't ride into El Paso with me on Thursday and see the troops arrive?" suggested Mr. Lake, returning to his newspaper with an indifferent air. "Want to go, Ann?"

"Of course I do, dad. And you, Sylvia?" she questioned her cousin.

"I must go, too!" cried Sylvia eagerly. "Why, I might see Timothy there."

"You probably will, my dear, if he has arrived." And Mr. Lake buried himself in his newspaper, this time oblivious to everything save the good night kisses, to which he submitted with genuine pleasure.

The next morning Sylvia and Annie mounted their horses and rode to the farthest boundaries of the ranch. From here, on the highest ridge, they paused and looked under shading hands toward the southwest, where a cloud hung over the place where was the city of El Paso.

"Perhaps by tomorrow he will be there," said Sylvia aloud.

Annie nodded her black curls. "It may be that he will arrive today," she suggested, with a gleam of amusement in her dark eyes.

Sylvia's blue eyes turned to the eastern horizon, where against the pale gray blue of the sky there blurred a dark plume of smoke. "Perhaps that is his train now, Ann." She pointed with her whip at the smoke.

"It may be, honey. I think you're the luckiest girl in the world, Sylvia Moore. Tim's such a fine fellow. I wonder"— Annie stopped abruptly and fell to musing, with her black eyes fixed on the rolling alfalfa that rippled before her.

"What do you wonder?" asked Sylvia curiously, withdrawing from her own reverie.

"I was wondering if you really meant what you said about asking Tim to stay away from a battle if there is to be one," said Annie, her eyes now gravely fixed on her cousin.

"A man owes some duty to the girl he loves, and there are plenty of men who can fight for the country—men who have no friends or relatives or have no ties to bind them. How selfish I am, Annie, and yet somehow I can only seem to think of two things today. One is Timothy Robeson, and the other is myself."

"Let's talk about something else," said Annie. And so the conversation turned to the beauty of the March day and thence to the absorbing topic of clothes.

It was not until two days after this conversation that the little party set forth to go to El Paso. They started just at daybreak.

All the way to El Paso Sylvia's ears were eagerly alert for the sound of warfare. She did not dare voice her fears, but they were very large fears and very agonizing ones too.

She had been proud indeed that her future husband should be an officer in a fine regiment. She thought the sight of Timothy in his uniform the dearest thing in the world, and the very thought of the military wedding that would mark her marriage to the handsome young man sent her into ecstasies of delight.

This was the other side of the war picture. Here was the beat of the drum calling to arms. Real powder and shot had been issued to the men, and real shot would be fired. In fancy she saw her beloved killed at the head of his column, always leading, always waving his sword and shouting encouragement to his weary men.

They came upon the new city, the tented one, all of a sudden and looked with awe upon the results of a deep thinking war department, a capable executive staff and a well trained army. A day or two ago and there had been a cactus plain; today there were a field of snowy tents and a multitude of orderly men awaiting the summons to—what?

To Sylvia Moore war meant desperate fighting, the sudden death of Timothy Robeson and for herself a lifelong separation from the man she loved.

When they were in the city and saw the flying flags and heard the outpouring of martial music the heart of Sylvia beat quickly, and she felt more like crying than ever. If she could only see Timothy for one moment she was sure she could persuade him to stay with her.

Presently through Mr. Lake's influence it was made possible for Sylvia to meet her lover, and in the first joyful moment the strangeness of the meeting was quite forgotten. At last Timothy pushed back his cap and said:

"I'll bet you were surprised to hear I was on the way, eh, Sylvia?"

"Yes," said Sylvia, suddenly very quiet. Then, after a pause, she said in a low tone, "Timothy, I wonder if you care enough for me to do a big thing for me—a great thing—the greatest thing you ever did in your life."

"Of course," said Timothy promptly. "My life's yours, you know, dearest."

"Then stay with me. Do not go into active battle." Sylvia's voice was strained with anxiety, and her eyes were fixed eagerly on her lover's face. She saw the mask of reserve that dropped over his surprised face—a reserve that seemed to place her and her love upon some distant pinnacle of space, leaving him here in the active present with the duty that lay before him. She saw all this and realized what was passing through his mind, and yet, with a selfishness which had not yet been overcome by a nobler impulse, she set herself to exact from him a proof of his love for her.

"Shall I desert?" he asked, with a cold smile.

"Oh, no! Tell them you are ill. Perhaps I might explain. You know we are to be married in the fall, Timothy!"

"I know, dear," he said steadily, "that this is the hardest moment of your life. I'll think over what you said, and if at the end of another day you still feel the same way about it perhaps something can be done."

"Oh, Timmy, you are an angel—and I was so afraid you'd get killed!" half sobbed Sylvia.

Timothy Robeson smiled rather mysteriously and turned away. "Perhaps I'll see you later, dear, if Mr. Lake will come around after parade. Time's up now."

They spent the day in the city, and as the afternoon advanced they once more approached the parade ground, where they expected to meet Timothy Robeson again. Mr. Lake and Annie stopped to view some passing soldiery, and Sylvia had paused to find herself the onlooker at a curious little scene.

A handsome though rather dissipated looking young man in military khaki lounged against a tree talking to a very indignant young woman. "Ah, what's the use?" he was muttering sullenly, when his companion interrupted him with blazing eyes and angry voice.

"Matt Mears, you're a coward, that's what you are!" she cried. "I wouldn't give a snap of my finger for a man that didn't put his country before the girl he loved."

"Oh, pshaw, Laura," began the young man weakly, when the girl suddenly walked away from him with her pretty chin in the air.

Her words rang in Sylvia's ears as they went to meet Timothy. Before her was the city of tents, busy with the hum of preparation, the flutter of myriads of flags—her own red, white and blue emblems—and a choking feeling came into her throat. She knew now that never, never would she have Timothy belong to anything except this glorious company, organized to protect her, her relatives, her friends—everybody in the country. There were great industries, vast enterprises, to be protected. Oh, her Timothy was of the noblest profession in the country—the protectors!

When Timothy's grave eyes questioned hers he was startled by the blue flash of patriotism that Sylvia's eyes declared.

"Timothy," she whispered eagerly and with emphasis laid on each word—"Timothy Robeson, don't you dare dream of not going into battle. If you don't go—why, I'll never speak to you again as long as I live!"

The End at Last.

Miss Sparhawk believed in "having clothes appropriate to occasions," and she graded her wearing apparel with great care. She boasted, and with reason, that she could "get more wear out of a dress" than any one else in Canby.

When the garment was past its first, second and third stages of usefulness for public wear it was relegated to certain seasons of domestic stress, from which it passed eventually to the rag bag. One gingham, long dear to Miss Sparhawk's heart, had reached this last stage, and she acknowledged it one day to the village seamstress.

"Don't seem as if I'd had half the good I expected to out of it," she said wistfully. "'Tisn't but eight years since I had it made up. Two years I wore it Sundays; the next two, sewing circle afternoons; next two, when I went errands to the village, and these last two round the house, common. But now"—and she regarded the bundle sorrowfully before stuffing it into the yawning piece bag—"now 'tisn't even fit to hang out washing in Mondays."—Youth's Companion.

Powerful Paper.

A surveyor when inspecting one of the cottages under his care had his attention called by the tenant to a large diagonal crack in one of the walls, close to which they were standing, with the remark from Mrs. Hodge, "I am afraid, sir, as the old house be a-coming down, sir."

"We will see to this," said the agent, and, taking from his pocket a few strips of stamp edging, he pasted them transversely over the fissure so that he might on his next visit see whether the crack had extended and whether it was a settlement or not.

On his calling about a month afterward he found the pieces of stamp edging still remaining unbroken and pointing out to the old lady that the crack had not opened any farther was amused with this unhesitating remark: "Yes, sir, but who'd ha' thought as two or three such bits of paper would ha' held un together?"—London Answers.

The Tea Drinkers.

The chronic tea drinkers of this country are generally the kitchen girls and women who remain in the kitchen and in the house a great deal. The teapot is constantly on the stove, and the strong, stale brew, full of tannic acid and bitter extractives, is poured into the stomach at frequent intervals. Here we get not only the stimulation of the caffein, but the irritation of the tannin derivatives on the stomach mucous membrane. The sooner or later result is sleeplessness, an irritable, fretty disposition, nervous dyspepsia or even gastritis and constipation. Of course the treatment is to stop the cause, treat the insomnia, dyspepsia and constipation and give fresh air. Tea tasters show earlier than other individuals decay of the teeth. Children up to fifteen years should not drink coffee or tea regularly.—Journal of American Medical Association.

Osman Pasha's Daring.

One of the most gallant generals that ever surrendered to the enemy was Osman Pasha, the immortal defender of Plevna. Surrounded by an immeasurably superior army of Russia, Osman kept his flag flying for 142 days, inflicting a loss of 40,000 men on the enemy and losing 30,000 of his own garrison. It was only when both provisions and ammunition failed that he decided on that desperate attempt to cut his way through the investing army. The attempt, one of the most daring and resolute in history, failed, and Osman was at last compelled to admit defeat. So impressed, however, were the enemy with his valor that as he was carried wounded through their ranks they greeted him as a conqueror with cheers and presented arms.

Lincoln Told a Story.

At one time a friend complained to President Lincoln that a certain cabinet officer was administering his office with unusual energy with the hope of securing the presidential nomination.

"That reminds me," said Mr. Lincoln, "that my brother and I were once plowing a field with a lazy horse, but at times he rushed across the field so fast that I could hardly keep up with him. At last I found an enormous chin fly on him and knocked it off. Now, I am not going to make that mistake a second time. If the secretary has a chin fly on him I am not going to knock it off, if it will only make his department go."

The Clear Infinity.

That which we foolishly call vastness is, rightly considered, not more wonderful, not more impressive, than that which we insolently call littleness, and the infinity of God is not mysterious, it is only unfathomable; not concealed, but incomprehensible; it is a clear infinity, the darkness of the pure, unsearchable sea.—Ruskin's "Modern Painters."

Revenge by Proxy.

Makings of an Artist.

He who works with his hands only is a mechanic; he who works with hand and head is an artisan, and he who works with hands, head and heart is an artist.—Ruskin.

AVOIDING DIVORCE

Chicago Judge Gives Some Pointers on Guiding Matrimonial Ship.

Judge Petit, of Chicago, who has just completed his annual six weeks' calendar, made up mostly of divorce suits, has come to the conclusion that parents of young married people are largely to blame for family troubles.

"The mothers-in-law are foremost trouble-makers," said the judge. "I have all reverence for mothers and motherhood, but they must not argue with their daughter-in-law or son-in-law, but must realize that they are individuals and have their work to do in the world. Mother can give advice when asked for it.

"Summer resorts, winter resorts and flat life can be blamed for many divorces. It is bad for husband and wife to be separated by trips away from home.

"My advice to husbands who wish to avoid divorce is this:

"Don't quote mother.

"Call up your wife while at business and ask how she is, and say that you called her up just to hear her voice.

"Bring her a box of candy.

"One of the new books that she is interested in.

"A flower, even if it is faded and you have picked it up off the street.

"A pretty pin or handkerchief.

"And don't ever lay your head on your pillow at night without having done something to gain and obtain a firmer hold on your wife's love.

"Kiss her every day.

"At least once a month meet her downtown and take her to dinner and the theater.

"Don't ever stop courting, for as soon as you do some other man will begin.

"Make your wife your companion.

"Take her out with you, and when you have to have a big time take your wife along, and the divorce evil will be lessened.

"For the wives I should advise:

"Don't quote father.

"Pet your husband; he is only a big kid.

"Meet him at the door with a smile.

"Dress as carefully as you did when he came courting.

"Wear the color he likes you in and the style of gown.

"Have something in the way of a surprise dish for dinner.

"Read the papers and magazines and be your husband's intellectual equal.

"Keep up with him in any special line of work.

"Encourage his hobby.

"Be sympathetic, and do not tell him all the troubles of the day; he has had his own, more significant and important individually than all yours put together.

"Keep his clothes in order, a clean house and good food.

"Your husband is then yours forever and ever. No chorus girl or pretty stenographer can take him away from you. But keep him, or somebody else will snap him up and make him think she and she alone ever did or will understand him."

CENSOR MOVING PICTURES

Board Composed of One Man and One Woman to Examine all Films.

Every film shown in a moving picture exhibition in Pennsylvania in the future will be censored. Gov. John K. Tener has signed House bill No. 601 creating a board of censors and fixing the salaries of the members and the penalities for showing films which had not been passed upon. The bill, which becomes a law January 1, 1912, is similar to laws in other states.

The board of censors will consist of one man and one woman. The chief censor will receive a salary of $1,500 a year and his assistant will receive $1,200 a year. All their expenses will be paid out of the state treasury and will be included in the biennial appropriation. The chief censor will have to furnish a bond of $3,000 and his assistant $2,000.

The duties of the State Board of Censors, the name of the body, shall be to pass upon every film shown in the state. In addition the board shall see that each film thus censored and approved shall be marked "Approved by the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors."

For each examination of films made by the censors a fee of $2.50 will be charged and this money shall be turned into the state treasury and the funds shall be used to further the provisions of the act. No picture or film shall be examined before the fee is paid.

The penalties for showing or permitting to be exhibited a picture or film that has not been censored shall be a fine of not less than $50 for the first offense, and not less than $100 for each subsequent offense. It shall be considered a separate offense every time an unapproved picture is shown each day.

This law, however, does not include exhibitions of moving picture and stereopticon views given purely for educational, charitable, fraternal or religious purposes or given by any charitable or educational institution chartered by the state.

"The act will not affect the moving picture shows in the state to any extent, said John P. Harris, originator of the 5-cent picture shows. "For some years New York has had a similar law and nearly all pictures already are censored. Not only this, but the manufacturers and agencies themselves long ago learned that pictures must be moral and not objectional, because at one time the very life of the business depended upon the character of the pictures shown.

"Practically all the films in the United States are controlled by the General Film Company of New York. It handles about 36 new subjects every week, from which are made hundreds of films. The independent manufacturers make 20 films each week. I believe that all will welcome the proposed censorship. There are about 2,000 subjects shown in Pittsburg every year and they are all censored by the companies which make them. There are about 12,000 moving picture shows in the United States and about $10,000,000 annually is paid for admission to see the shows."

Gov. Tener has not named the censors. Until he does it will not be settled how the board will work, but Mr. Harris suggested the easiest way to inspect all the films would be for the censors to go to New York and inspect the reels before they are sent out by the big agencies, and in that way it would be impossible for any film to be shown that had not been censored and approved. Any cases of violation can be reported from the places where pictures without the approval mark are place on exhibition.

MOB RULE IN PITTSBURG

Terrible Days of 1877 Recalled by Article of Historian.

Saturday afternoon was a bad time to tackle a mob in Pittsburg. It was a general half-holiday and the crowd was swelled by the mill and factory hands and the miners in the neighborhood, who, as well as the train men, were exasperated by the news of bloodshed in Baltimore and doubted the legality of the presence of state troops. Tramps abounded, and these together with outcasts and criminals gave a lawless complexion to the mob they reinforced. It is said that Cassatt was asked to defer the offensive movement until Monday, but he insisted that the state should restore to the railroad its property. Latta and Pearson met the Philadelphia troops at the Union station, and Brinton acted under the command of his superior officers. Before setting out on the march to Twenty-eighth street he gave instructions to his two brigadiers and to his regimental commanders to the effect that he did not want a shot fired, but that if personal violence was attempted the men should defend themselves. The Philadelphia troops then marched to the Twenty-eighth street crossing where they found the Pittsburg milita fraternizing with a mob of many thousands, in which the vicious element was large. They partly cleared the tracks, but as the rioters pressed between their ranks they were forced to the defensive and formed a hollow square. A bayonet charge wounded a number and exasperated the rest.

The rioters threw stones and lumps of coal at the soldiers, and followed up these missiles with pistol shots. Emboldened by the lack of resistance, those in front seized the muskets and attempted to wrest them from the troops. Some few were disarmed when at about 5 o'clock a scattering fire began along the line, which increased to a volley, but, as the officers did their best to stop it, lasted less than a minute. But at least 16 of the rioters were instantly killed and many were wounded. Moral support should have been forthcoming for these brave militiamen who had been precipitately ordered forward to attempt an impossible task; but the Pittsburg public generally regarded their act as murderous. RESULTS THAT REMAIN

Are Appreciated by Bellefonte People.

Thousands who suffer from backache and kidney complaint have tried one remedy after another, finding only temporary benefit. This is discouraging, but there is one special kidney medicine that cures permanently and there is plenty of proof right here in Bellefonte.

Here is the testimony of one who used Doan's Kidney Pills years ago, and now states that the cures was lasting

Mrs. B. F. Dietrich, 391 E. Bishop St., Bellefonte, Pa., says: "I know that Doan's Kidney Pills are a good remedy and I do not hesitate one moment in confirming the public statement I gave in their praise in Oct. 1907. A member of my family complained a great deal of backache and headaches and I had heard so much about Doan's Kidney Pills that I procured a supply at Green's Pharmacy Co. Their use effected a complete cure and also strengthened the kidneys. The benefit received has been permanent and I have thus been convinced that Doan's Kidney Pills live up to representations."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

All My Pimples Gone.

Girl Tells How a Blotchy Skin Was Cleansed by a Simple Wash.

"I was ashamed of my face," writes Miss Minnie Pickard of Altamahaw, N. C. "It was all full of pimples and scars, but after using D. D. D. Prescription I can say that now there is no sign of that Eczema, and that was three years ago."

D. D. D. has become so famous as a cure and instant relief in Eczema and all other serious skin diseases, that its value is sometimes overlooked in clearing up rash, pimples, blackheads, and all other minor forms of skin impurities.

The fact is, that while D. D. D. is so penetrating that it strikes to the very root of Eczema or any other serious trouble, the soothing Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients are so carefully compounded there is no wash for the skin made that can compare with this great household remedy for every kind of skin trouble.

D. D. D. is pleasant to use, perfectly harmless to the most delicate skin, and absolutely reliable. A 25 cent bottle will give you positive proof of the wonderful effectiveness of this great remedy.

Getting Signatures.

"How did Bliggins get all those signatures to his petition?"

"The unscrupulous villain purloined his daughter's autograph album."

Poor Father.

Visitor—Goodness! How quiet it is around your house today. Is anybody dead?

William—No; but pa's standing on tiptoe on the dictionary on top of the three-legged chair putting on a gas mantle, and baby's leaning against the chair joggling it, and ma's sitting on the floor hoping pa'll burn his whiskers and bust the mantle, so she'll have a chance to say "I told you so."

It is gratifying to us to be able to enroll Irvin Delaney, of Milesburg, as a new subscriber to "The Republican." Several days ago his daughter called at this office and had Mr. Delaney's name placed on our list.

Montgomery & Company furnished the natty new caps being worn by Policemen Dukeman and Justice. The pattern is that worn by the police in Philadelphia, with the exception that the city police wear white canvas caps during the summer.

A large crowd was in attendance upon the Yearick-Hoy reunion at Hecla Park on Friday of last week. Adam R. Yearick, president of the association, presided. An interesting program was rendered. It was decided to hold the next annual reunion at Hecla Park in the third week in June, the exact date to be announced later.

There was no measuring the distress of Captain A. C. Mingle on Tuesday evening. Little "Mac," a Fox terrier greatly prized by the family, followed the Mingle automobile on Tuesday evening and unfortunately got under the wheels as the car was passing in front of the Brockerhoff House. The weight of the car crushed out the life of the little dog.

James R. Garfield, ex-Secretary of the Interior, is scheduled to talk on "Rural Life," on Friday morning, July 7, at State College, the occasion being a "Conference on Rural Conditions." The program covers three days, July 5, 6 and 7. A large list of distinguished speakers has been announced and morning, afternoon and evening sessions will be held.

Vance McCormick, of Harrisburg, the hustling publisher of the Harrisburg "Patriot" and one of the leaders in the Democratic reorganization movement in the State, took a long chance on his political reputation while in Bellefonte a few days ago. He was enroute to State College to attend a meeting of the Board of Trustees, of which he is a member, and while here he called to pay his respects to the editor of "The Republican." "The Republican" office doesn't seem very much like home to a rampant Democrat, but Mr. McCormick's call was of a purely social character, our friendship covering a period of ten or twelve years. Vance is a mighty good fellow and while at Yale was a star on the football field. The only point on which we seriously differ is politics, and each is confoundedly certain the other is dead wrong.

Several valuable improvements have recently been installed in the big, hustling store of Joseph & Co. A huge electric fan, propelled by a one-half horse power motor, and located at the extreme rear of the store, keeps the place comfortable on the hottest days. In the business office a Burroughs adding machine has been installed and in all probability a typewriter will be purchased. In the near future a new and modern cashier system will be installed. Instead of having the corps of casbiers stationed on an elevated platform they will be seated on the main floor. Encountering so much enterprise displayed at one time in the store prompted us to wager a big black cigar with Herman Holz that before the close of another year he would be taking "joy rides" in his own automobile. Mr. Holz took the bet. If we lose we are going to make him another wager. This is that inside of the next five years he will shake the dust of our streets and make his future home with that grand-daughter, in New York City. We are almost tempted to bet him the automobile on that.

After pondering over the subject for several months, Christ Decker, of Bellefonte, this week formally entered the field for one of the two Republican nominations for County Commissioner. Of course, he hopes the cat jumps his way.

"The fire is still burning on our altars", says Mr. Hepler, "and God helps us contend for the faith that was once delivered unto the saints."

When A. A. Pletcher and a score or more of other citizens of Howard were in Bellefonte this week attending the L. C. Thompson bankruptcy hearing, somebody aptly remarked that it was a case of "16 to 1." It so happened that at one time Al. was standing in a group of seventeen or more friends on the Court House steps and that he was the only Democrat in the bunch. Another friend remarked that he supposed Al. would continue to be a Democrat, even though he stood entirely alone on that side of the fence. We hope not, anyhow.

Judge Savidge, of Northumberland County, specially presiding in a case in Centre County disposed of this week, paid this compliment to the borough manner in which John Blanchard, a Bellefonte lawyer, handled the matter for his clients: "As sometimes happens, the requests of counsel for findings are so full and satisfying, so comprehensive of the facts and such a complete treatise on the law, that we gladly adopt them in lieu of any further comment or opinion. We affirm all of plaintiff's requests for findings of fact and law, and find the facts from the evidence and the law applicable thereto to be as in said requests stated."

MARY L. CEADER DEAD

Passes Away at Home of Parents in Bellefonte on Tuesday Morning.

To those who had been so tenderly watching at her bedside the death of Mary Louise Ceader was no surprise, and yet there were so many of her friends and acquaintances who had been confidently hoping that time would eventually restore her to health that the news that she had passed away was received by the community with profound sorrow and regret. Her illness of several years had so completely exhausted her vitality that at 11.40 o'clock on Tuesday morning she breathed her last.

It is seldom that one so young is called upon to bear the sufferings that seemed destined in the life of Mary Louise Ceader. When other girls of her age were able to be about and enjoy life she found that such pleasures were not to be hers, and yet she bore her cross with such beautiful fortitude that few outside her immediate family and circle of friends ever knew the extent of her sufferings. The wonder was that her system was so long able to withstand the ravages of disease, but time and again when it seemed that the end had been reached she rallied and fought bravely on. For several days prior to her death it was realized that the last spark of life had all but fled and on Tuesday, just a few minutes before the noon hour, her eyes were closed in peaceful and endless sleep.

Mary Louise Ceader was one whose pure, Christian girlhood life endeared her to a host of friends. A stranger as it were to all that was selfish, gifted with a gentleness that made her very presence a pleasure to others, hers was a place in the esteem and affection of the community that is won by but a few and is envied by all. Taken away in the flush of young womanhood her death is more sad than empty words may express.

The deceased was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ceader. She was born in Bellefonte 33 years ago and all of her life was spent in this place. Aside from her parents she is survived by one sister, Helen, and one brother, Joseph. The funeral services will be held tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock from St. John's Catholic church.

Found at Milesburg.

Frank Weaver, a young man employed in the L. C. Jones moving picture show, at Lock Haven, on Monday night started out for a walk. Apparently he had become affected by the heat, for he wandered about in an aimless manner all that night and the next day, when, late in the afternoon, he was detained at Kohlbecker's hotel, at Milesburg, until friends at Lock Haven could be notified. Mr. Jones and John Waite, the latter formerly of Bellefonte, came up from Lock Haven in Mr. Waite's automobile. Mr. Jones took the unfortunate young man back to Lock Haven and Mr. Waite came to Bellefonte, where he remained over night with his brother, Darius Waite.
